Highlighting Scholarly Information Services & Resources for the UHCL Community

FROM THE EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

In times of tight budgets, endowment funds can make all the difference. Thanks to the generous vision of Kathy Tamer, Neumann Library has funds devoted to incorporating new technology into our library. This year the librarians have chosen to focus on two projects that will offer our students and faculty innovative capabilities.

Four Sony ebook readers are on order and will be available for check out. Each handheld reader will be loaded with an assortment of non-fiction leadership and management books, as well as popular fiction. The ebooks are licensed from Netlibrary, the same provider of the majority of the 86,000 ebooks already available through the Library Catalog.

The other technology investment will be a "smart" projection system, which offers the benefit of an interactive whiteboard that connects to a computer with an easy-to-use USB device and captures notes electronically. It will allow access to the Internet or other applications directly from the board and will include a presentation pen that performs like a mouse. The system will give our students an opportunity to enhance collaborative learning and practice their presentation skills.

Resources to help combat student plagiarism

The UHCL student publication The Signal recently included an article about student plagiarism and on-campus efforts to address this academic honesty concern.* Helping students understand and avoid plagiarism is particularly challenging in a digital environment. To make matters more difficult, plagiarism, an ethical issue related to using someone else's intellectual property without appropriate acknowledgement in the form of a citation, also can be confused with legal issues of copyright infringement and fair use.

This article spotlights plagiarism education-related articles, books, and web sites. Off-campus access to fulltext for most of the articles listed will require authentication with your UHCL faculty, staff, or student library barcode number.

Getting a handle on the financial crisis

The current economic crisis is far from over, but the good news is that many government agencies are providing information for consumers, investors, and anyone else trying to make sense of it all.

The library's Government Documents department has put together a display using a number of government resources to highlight changes in the local economy. You can view the display on the third floor of the library, next to the elevators. Below are a few of the web sites that are featured.

- Speaker of the House's job loss comparison chart

- St. Louis Federal Reserve Bank's Financial Crisis Timeline
- Rebuilding America's Infrastructure map

- Houston-Sugar Land-Baytown Economy at a Glance

See also the Government Documents Collection Special Interest web page tab for more information on the economic crisis.

As a federal and state depository, the Neumann Library is committed to providing public access to government publications. For more information, contact Gay Carter, Reference/Documents Librarian, or Heather Strawser, Documents Associate.
